

the first time in the history of the world, the people of the United States have gathered together on the occasion of their national independence, to consider the question, whether they shall, as a nation, continue to exist or not. They have done this, not in a spirit of fear, but in a spirit of confidence; not in a spirit of despair, but in a spirit of hope; not in a spirit of gloom, but in a spirit of light; not in a spirit of despondency, but in a spirit of energy and determination. They have done this, not in a spirit of indifference, but in a spirit of enthusiasm; not in a spirit of apathy, but in a spirit of activity; not in a spirit of languor, but in a spirit of vigor; not in a spirit of weariness, but in a spirit of energy; not in a spirit of despair, but in a spirit of hope; not in a spirit of gloom, but in a spirit of light; not in a spirit of despondency, but in a spirit of energy and determination. They have done this, not in a spirit of indifference, but in a spirit of enthusiasm; not in a spirit of apathy, but in a spirit of activity; not in a spirit of languor, but in a spirit of vigor; not in a spirit of weariness, but in a spirit of energy; not in a spirit of despair, but in a spirit of hope; not in a spirit of gloom, but in a spirit of light; not in a spirit of despondency, but in a spirit of energy and determination. They have done this, not in a spirit of indifference, but in a spirit of enthusiasm; not in a spirit of apathy, but in a spirit of activity; not in a spirit of languor, but in a spirit of vigor; not in a spirit of weariness, but in a spirit of energy; not in a spirit of despair, but in a spirit of hope; not in a spirit of gloom, but in a spirit of light; not in a spirit of despondency, but in a spirit of energy and determination.

